Wu-Han and Nanking Nationalists May Clash.

HOSTILITIES IMMINENT.

How This Development Will Affect Canton.

POLITICAL ASPECT OF SITUATION.

Is it the beginning of the end?

To all intents and purposes, the two major factions of the Chinese Nationalists are now openly at variance. Hostilities have broken out between Wu-Han and Nanking, and Wu-Han is well on the way towards severing political relations, an action that may have considerable bearing on Canton's attitude. There are several indications to-day that the Nationalist Government at Nanking is in process of disintegration, what with war breaking out again on the Yangtze.

FOES ON BOTH SIDES.

Hostilities are reported to have broken out on the Yangtze River, above and below Nanking, involving three rival cliques in the Nationalist Party.

The Wu-Han armies which came down to Wuhu are moving forward again, ostensibly with Nanking as their objective. Below Nanking (i.e., at Chinkiang), adherents of Chiang Kai-shek are taking up positions in readiness to keep out armies supporting the "Nanking coalition," tension having been caused by movements at Wuhu.

General Liu Hsing (36th Army) of Wu-Han is leading the advance down river and his men are reported to have clashed with and repulsed the outposts of the 7th Army (General Li Tsung-jen) of the Nanking side. The "action" was fought 4½ miles south-east of Wuhu, whence the 7th Army retreated down river towards Nanking.

Japanese to Leave?

According to Japanese advice from Wuhu (quoted by the "Kung Sheung Yat Po"), the Wu-Han forces surrounded detachments belonging to General Li Tsung-jen and also to General Ho Ying-ching (Chiang Kai-shek's right hand man) and to General Chiang Chien (6th Army), who came down from Wu-Han but is supposed to be in favour of the Nanking coalition government. Some of the Nanking troops extricated themselves, continues the report, and retired on Nanking.

Japanese nationals are ready to leave Chinkiang. Here the trouble is said to be caused by General Ho Ying-ching's army exercising precautions to prevent the approach of troops under General Li Tsung-jen of Nanking and of General Chiang Chien (formerly of Wu-Han but now supporting Nanking).

IN THE WAR ZONE.

Wuhu Position: Nanking Troops Get Pay.

Wuhu, Yesterday.

A mild form of martial law has been enforced by the military in charge here.

The troops have shut down the local labour unions.

From Anking (up river), the Commissioner for Foreign Affairs has now returned to Wuhu.—British Naval Wireless.

Northerners Come Down.

Nanking, Yesterday.

Some of the Northern army (under Marshal Sun Chuan-fang) is reported to have come down the Tientsin-Pukow Railway to Chuchow, which is only about 30 miles away from the north bank of the Yangtze River.

A number of the troops who have been dissatisfied have now received payment.

Measles is now prevalent in Nanking but cholera has almost subsided.—British Naval Wireless.

3,000 DISARMED.

Chiang's Adherents Extending Power.

Shanghai, Yesterday.

General Chow Feng-chi has resigned the chairmanships of the provincial and military committees of the Revolutionary in Chinkiang province. It is reported that 3,000 of Chow Feng-chi's troops at Hang-chow have been disarmed.—Reuter.

[Note: Chow Feng-chi is a Nationalist general of the Nanking faction, who deserted the Northerners last winter to join the winning side. Hangchow is the capital of Chekiang. Although Reuter does not say so, it is presumed that the disarming was carried out by General Ho Ying-ching (an adherent of Chiang Kai-shek) who is tightening his grip on Shanghai and Chekiang province.]

The "Hong Kong Evening Post" suggests that Chow Feng-chi resigned because he will not co-operate with the "Chiang Kai-shek diarchy" and says that General Ho Ying-ching succeeds him as chief of the Chekiang provincial administration.

POLITICAL "ROW."

Wu-Han In Opposition to Nanking.

While Nanking is still appointing governing committees with nominal power over the whole of Nationalist China, Wu-Han is now forming its own government and has almost completely broken away.

The "Hong Kong Evening Post" says that all departments of the Wu-Han governments are functioning and that the removal to Nanking has been definitely suspended. All bodies of the Kuomintang, from the "national" down to the "smallest," are joining in a circular telegram denouncing the special conference of delegates at Nanking. It is recommended that all provinces shall ignore orders from Nanking.

Familiar Names.

Several familiar names appear in the Wu-Han branch of the new Political Council in opposition to Nanking. General Tang Seng-chi, commander-in-chief, is, of course, the chairman. Others are Mr. Chen Kung-po and Mr. Koo Meng-yu (who were well-known in Canton in 1925), alleged by Nanking to be Communists. Another is General Ho Chien who is marching down the Yangtze on Nanking and then there is General Fan Chung-hsiao, leader of the "White Wolf Cubs," the semi-bandits in Honan.

The branch Political Council claims its authority from the Central Political Council of the Kuomintang.

ORDERS TO CANTON.

Also to Break Away From Nanking?

Nanking has ordered Canton to close down the branch of the Political Council as from tomorrow, October 1. Similar orders have been given to Kuomintang branches in other parts of China.

It remains to be seen whether Canton will comply. Wu-Han has flouted Nanking. If Canton follows suit, the presumption is that Canton is also breaking away from the Nationalist Government at Nanking, which is in course of disintegration.

In Line With Peking.

On the other hand it is announced that the political department of the Canton Police administration is to cease work.

To keep in line with Peking, Canton proposes sending a representative to attend the autumn military manoeuvres in Japan.

Marshals Chang Tso-lin had either General Yang Yu-ting (his chief of staff) or General Chang Tsung-chang (the Shantung warlord) in mind, states the report. General Li Chai-sum of Canton proposes sending his right hand man, General Chui Kiang-kong (who is head of the provincial military department).

TO BE PAID OFF.

Canton and the Pseudo Strikers.

$3,600,000 REQUIRED.

Treasury Bonds To Be Issued By Authorities.

"Rather than fill up their stomachs and see them idle," the Canton authorities prefer to wind up the anti-Hong Kong strike movement, says a Chinese report to hand.

Hitherto members of the strike movement who have been unable or who have not chosen to obtain employment ever since the official ending of the affair on October 10, 1926, have been provided with free accommodation and meals by the Canton Government.

A demobilisation bonus of $100 per man was promised of which $10 has been paid.

To wind up the Strikers' Association, continues the report, the Canton Government has been borrowing from the merchants of "towns and cities" in Kwangtung province. Some of the merchants have paid up. The district administrations have been instructed to hasten up collection so that final payment of the gratuity can be made.

HIGH FINANCE.

Treasury Scheme to Raise the Wind.

Another report on the subject makes interesting reading.

Canton's provincial treasurer estimates that $3,600,000 will be required to pay the strikers off. At $90 per head, the number of strikers remaining in Canton is therefore 40,000.

The branch of the Kuomintang Political Council has decided that payment will begin on October 10 (the anniversary of the Chinese Republic), exactly a year after Mr. Eugene Chen announced the end of the strike.

Half of the sum required (i.e., $1,800,000) will be raised by issuing treasury bonds, maturing in six months. The proceeds will be used to pay the bonus and the Government will then be able to save $300,000 a month, which now goes to feed the men. The total of the savings in six months will then offset the bond issue.

"ONLY SMILED."

Chiang Kai-shek's Impending Marriage.

Osaka, Yesterday.

General Chiang Kai-shek has arrived at Nagasaki and is going on to Utsunomiya.

He told reporters he was visiting Japan to observe her progress during the past ten years.

He was undecided whether he will go on to America and only smiled when asked about his proposed marriage with Miss Soong Mei-ling.—Reuter.

Shanghai, Yesterday.

NOT PAID.

Interest on Anglo-French Loan.

Peking, Yesterday.

It is feared that the Chinese Government will default in the Anglo-French loan. Interest due to bondholders on October 5 has not yet been paid in to the banks as should have been paid.—Reuter.

Ex-Hong Kong Strikers Join In Campaign.

Latest news from Swatow is that the Communist invaders are still in possession.

No further attempt has been made by the Canton naval arm to recapture Swatow by a landing force.

Situation Obscure.

Swatow, Yesterday. The Communist Army still holds the port of Swatow but the situation is not clear as to when the Cantonese hope to regain possession.

Tientsin, Yesterday.

Diplomatic representatives of all the foreign Powers met in Peking yesterday to discuss the Swatow situation and possible steps to protect their respective nationals now that the port is in the hands of Communists.—"Kung Sheung Yat Po."

BIG FIGHT SOON.

Communists Out of Immediate Danger.

From a reliable source, the "China Mail" understands that the Communists still hold Chaochow, their strength there having been reinforced by over 1,000 men from Swatow and along the railway.

The Communists' plan is now to give battle to the left wing of the pro-Canton army before the centre column comes up into line, the latter being delayed over difficult country. The Canton right wing, in the vicinity of Kityang (the closest to Swatow), is the weakest and is not advancing.

Advice by mail from Swatow is that the banks, Chinese hongs and the bigger shops are still closed for fear of further trouble.

Strikers in Uniform.

Detachments of the Communist army have been identified as former anti-Hong Kong strikers who have joined in with the invaders and have been provided with uniforms.

Observers are now of the opinion that the "Reds" have extricated themselves from the danger of being surrounded. In a day or two, they will be face to face with the right wing of the relief expedition which is slowly moving down the Han River from Muiyuen, and a decisive action is expected. Should the Communists win, they may go westwards to the East River where they may meet sterner opposition or make a bid for Canton.

FAIR WEATHER.

S.E. winds, moderate, fair, is the official weather forecast until noon to-morrow.

The typhoon which does not appear to be violent, is near Tokyo moving NE. A depression has formed over Tongking. A belt of relatively high pressure stretches from Korea to Formosa.

DEATH SENTENCE.

Chai Wan Murder Trial Concludes.

BOTH PRISONERS GUILTY.

Jury Unanimous After Long Retirement.

The concluding stages in the Chai Wan murder trial drama were reached at the Criminal Sessions this morning in the presence of many interested spectators.

His Lordship (Mr. Justice J. R. Wood) summed up for a full hour when the case re-opened this morning and the jury retired for thirty-five minutes, finally returning a verdict of Guilty against the two prisoners, who were then sentenced to death.

His Lordship, addressing the prisoners, said: "You have had a fair trial. The evidence on this indictment has been carefully considered by the jury and they have recorded a unanimous verdict that you are both guilty. Therefore my duty is to pass sentence of death upon you."

His Lordship then donned the significant black cap.

Prisoners received their sentences with composure.

The Summing Up.

In the course of summing up, earlier in the morning's proceedings, His Lordship emphasised that the Crown had to prove the prisoners' guilt beyond all reasonable doubt for a verdict of Guilty to be returned. The onus was on the Crown to prove its case and a Not Guilty verdict did not necessarily mean that the jury was satisfied of the innocence of the prisoner or prisoners, but merely that they were not satisfied that the case had been positively proved.

Referring to the case against the men as being based entirely on circumstantial evidence, His Lordship said that there were a number of circumstances involving prisoners, any one of which might not involve them very much by itself. It was for the jury to sift them out and arrange them with a view of fitting them together to see if collectively they produced that feeling of certainty which was equivalent to the positive proof of eyewitnesses.

Looking For Loopholes.

His Lordship emphasised that no greater degree of certainty was required in a capital charge than was required in any other case in which the services of a jury might be required and commented that one could not prove things with absolute certainty. The only thing one could do was to see that there was no obvious loophole.

His Lordship suggested that the key factor in the whole evidence and the one which should be considered first was whether the note, part of which was found on the path and part on the first prisoner, was or was not on that evening in the hand-bag of Mrs. Mackay. It was necessary for the jury to separate that fact out and consider the evidence for and against that proposition.

There was no definite evidence, said His Lordship, that this note was in Mrs. Mackay's possession. It was not, for instance, identified by its number. It would, again, be proof if, for instance, one half had been found on the prisoner and the other in Mrs. Mackay's hand-bag. The fact remained that if they came to the conclusion that the note was the same as that found they would have come to it without definite evidence. The evidence on which the Crown invited the jury to find that the note was one previously in the possession of Mrs. Mackay was as follows.

Blood on Note.

Half of the note was found on a path which was on the direct route from the scene of the crime to the direction of Shaukiwan. It was found at 2 a.m. on the day following the attack and as it had not been picked up before, it was fair to say that it had been dropped where it was found sometime after dusk—and the murder had taken place just before dark. Blood was on the half note found in the prisoner's pocket and blood was also in the hand-bag. Further evidence in support of the contention that the note was Mrs. Mackay's lay in the fact that it was a forged note and that Mrs. Mackay was known to have retained in her possession two such forged notes, one of which was actually left in the hand-bag. It was also in evidence that Mrs. Mackay had all one of these notes with a pair of scissors and that the two parts of the note found on the path and in the possession of the first prisoner, had also apparently been cut with scissors.

Shown Book.

Tsuni Fujikawa, an inmate of the house, then testified to the accused's visit at 2 a.m. on August 28. He knocked rather loudly on the door. The witness said that the accused was very drunk and at first hesitated to admit him. Eventually she let him in and he sat on the bed. The other people in the house were asleep. The accused was wearing a

UNUSUAL CIRCUMSTANCE.

Alderman With Prior Claim Stands Down.

London, Yesterday. Sir Charles Batho was chosen to-day as Lord Mayor of London for the coming year. Unusual circumstance marked the proceedings.

Sir Harold Moore had a prior claim to the Lord Mayoralty, since he was the senior alderman, but Sir C. Batho was only one day behind him in seniority.

Prior to the election taking place, Sir H. Moore withdrew his candidature. Stating his reasons, Sir Harold said he had withdrawn so as to avoid competition and principally because he was the youngest qualified candidate. He is fifty years of age.

Sir H. Moore added: "In my view it is eminently desirable that an older qualified candidate should have an opportunity of enjoying the high distinction and therefore I am willing to stand down temporarily."—British Wireless Service.

SERG. CHARGED.

IMPERSONATION OF POLICE ALLEGED.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

Sergeant Leonard Lowes of the Queens' Regiment was this morning charged before Mr. R. E. Lindsell at the Central Magistrate on two charges of impersonating a police officer at No. 9 Sampan Street and No. 9 Spring Garden Land, respectively, and obtaining $5 by a trick at No. 9 Sampan Street.

The accused pleaded "not guilty" to all the offences, which were alleged to have been committed on August 23 last.

A Captain of the Queen's Regiment occupied a seat on the bench with the Magistrate during the hearing of the case.

Very Angry.

Myo Yamashita, the mistress of No. 9, Sampan Street, said she first saw the accused one night towards the end of last month. The whole house was asleep at 2 a.m., when there came a loud knock on the door. One of the girls opened the door and the accused came in. He was not in uniform, but was wearing a white suit. The accused appeared to be very angry and the witness heard him say the word "Police-man."

Witness then became very scared and nervous that the police should raid her house, and did not hear any more that was said. Afterwards the accused asked for the loan of $10, but the witness gave him five $1 notes. The witness did this to keep the accused quiet. Accused stayed two hours in the house and then departed.

By the Magistrate: Since that night the witness had not seen the accused again until that morning in Court. She was not present at the identification parade when the accused was picked out.

Unable to Identify.

Sub-Inspector Stimson of the Secretariat for Chinese Affairs, to whom a report of the affair was made later that same morning, told the Magistrate that the witness did not attend the identification parade because she had stated that she was unable to identify the accused.

Mr. Lindsell asked the witness if in view of what she had told the police, she dared to swear that she was able to identify the accused in Court as the man who visited her house.

The witness said that she could. She explained that she was very nervous at the time she interviewed Inspector Stimson, and did not know what she was saying.

Answering another question, the witness said that when the accused told her that he was a policeman, she believed him.

Agreement Reached At Manchester.

AMERICAN SECTION.

System Of Curtailment Of Production Approved.

London, Yesterday. An agreement reached at the cotton conference at Manchester provides that curtailment of production throughout the American section be dealt with sectionally and not by the method of treating all alike regardless of the amount of work they have in hand and to state their stocks on a system of basic prices to be adopted by which prices will be fixed according to the price current of the month, futures plus nine points and something for costs.

While all branches of the cotton trade express satisfaction at the agreement, Sir Edwin Stockton doubts whether the agreement will result in anything more than a temporary alleviation of the position. He re-emphasised the necessity of putting production on an economic basis in order to meet competition satisfactorily.

Sir Charles Macara declared: "Two bodies with no compulsory powers and without the co-operation of the operatives can hardly expect to succeed."—Reuter.

EUROPEAN INJURED.

NASTY MOTOR ACCIDENT FOLLOWS SKID.

DRIVER IN HOSPITAL.

Mr. D. H. Perry, employed at the A.P.C. installation at North Point is now in the Government Civil Hospital as the result of a nasty motor car accident in Morrison Hill Road, near the Civil Service Cricket Club at 2 o'clock this morning.

It was raining at the time, and the road was wet and very slippery. Mr. Perry drove motor car No. 1,886 down Morrison Gap Road into Morrison Hill Road. In making the bend, Mr. Perry took too sharp a turn and the car skidded across the road. It collided with the tram standard outside the C.S.C.C. with great force.

The front part of the car was knocked upwards, and the axle was so badly bent that the two front wheels almost met around the standard. Mr. Perry was struck on the jaw with great force by the steering wheel and rendered unconscious.

Soon afterwards another car appeared, the occupants of which took Mr. Perry on board and removed him first to his house in North Point, and later to the Government Civil Hospital.

It is understood that Mr. Perry's jaw was broken and his tongue badly injured. He is progressing as well as can be expected.

white civilian suit. Accused was very angry when he came in and said to the witness: "I am the No. 1 Police Inspector and I want to see your book." The witness showed accused the book, and he signed it.

Inspector Stimson explained that what the witness referred to was the house register.

Proceeding, the witness said that the accused also said to her: "Tomorrow you will go to the police station, and you will lose $200 for not opening the door to the No. 1 Inspector." The witness apologised and said that she did not know his identity. Accused then said: "Next time you don't open quick I will take your licence and close No. 9. This time I will fix it up so that you will have to pay only $50."

Handed Him $5.

The accused stayed two hours in the house, and just before going asked the witness to change $10 for him. The witness said that she had only five $1 bills, and handed these over to him. Accused pocketed the notes and walked out. He did not give the witness a $5 note in exchange for the money he received from her.

About two or three weeks after the affair, the witness went to the Military Hospital and there picked the accused out of eight or nine soldiers standing in a row. She picked him out as the man who had

"THE BERMUDA."

LUXURIOUS NEW MOTOR PASSENGER LINER.

The quadruple-screw motor passenger liner "Bermuda," which has been built to the order of Messrs. The Bermuda and West Indies Steamship Company, Limited, who are associated with Messrs. Furness, Withy and Company, Limited, was launched successfully on July 28, last, from the North Yard, Belfast, of Messrs. Workman Clark and Company, Limited. The vessel, which is intended for service between New York and Bermuda, and also for long cruises round the world, has a length of 550 ft., a beam of 74 ft., a depth, to the shelter deck, of 45 ft., and a displacement of 20,000 tons. The propelling machinery comprises four sets of Duxford opposed-piston reversible oil engines, each with four cylinders, having a diameter of 600 mm. and a combined stroke length of 1,800 mm., installed in the main engine room. Four electric generating sets, driven by Diesel engines, are fitted in the auxiliary engine room, which is separated from the main engine room by a watertight bulkhead. Two donkey boilers intended for heating the fuel and accommodation, and for cooking purposes, are installed in the auxiliary engine room. The auxiliaries, generally speaking, are electrically driven, as also are the steering gear, capstans, windlasses, and winches.

There are seven decks devoted to passenger accommodation, which is of an exceptionally luxurious character. Apart from the dining saloon, which is capable of seating over 400 passengers, and the foyer, the public rooms are all on A deck and on the boat deck. The vessel is built to carry 616 first-class and 75 second-class passengers. The total number of first-class cabins is 250, and many of these rooms are arranged for individual accommodation. The electric lighting is of the indirect type, and the rooms are separately heated and ventilated by a mechanical system, through directional louvers, from which the flow of air can be regulated as desired. The boat deck and the deck below are extended beyond the beam of the ship by as much as 2 ft. 6 in., on each side. On the boat deck there is an area, some 70 ft. in length, for sports and other purposes.

The service arrangements of the ship are very complete; the cooking appliances are largely electrical, and a modern steam and electric laundry has been provided. The vessel has been built to comply with the latest requirements of the British Board of Trade, the United States Regulations, and Lloyd's Register. There are nine watertight bulkheads, extending to the main deck, the watertight doors being fitted with hydraulic machinery for rapid closing; these are operated from the bridge. The cargo arrangements include insulated and refrigerated chambers for the carriage of chilled meat, similar chambers for the carriage of fruit and vegetable cargo, and 'tween decks and hold space for general cargo; part of the space is arranged for the carriage of motor cars. Another cargo to be carried is fresh water for delivery to the Company's hotel in Bermuda, and, in connection with this, special pumping arrangements are being provided. The whole of the work in the vessel has been carried out under the supervision of Messrs. Esplan, Son and Swainston, Messrs. Gardner, of Glasgow, and the owners' representatives.

THE CECIL RESIGNATION.

We have had to await the arrival of the Home newspapers to ascertain the full story of Viscount Cecil's resignation from the Cabinet. That it was concerned with British policy in regard to the Naval Disarmament Conference at Geneva and not because of any personal disagreement with fellow-members of the Cabinet we knew; but exactly where the noble lord's views differed from those of his colleagues, we knew not.
Now it appears that he was vastly out of sympathy with the instructions he received prior to setting out for Geneva; that, indeed,
his colleagues' and his own ideas
on the question of Disarmament (apart from any definitely outlined British policy) were poles apart in particular regard to a single aspect of their record—
which was, however, in no way
related to the country's domestic affairs. As has been pointed out elsewhere, the full extent of the difference of opinion between Lord Cecil and the Government as to what may prudently be undertaken in furtherance of an ideal is revealed in his deploring "the unconditional rejection of the Protocol" elaborated at Geneva in 1924. The staggering nature of the risks and the overwhelming
burden of unshared responsibility
to which Great Britain would have been subjected by the acceptance of that scheme have been on countless occasions emphasised;
and the proposition, rightly according to most people, was dropped. Risks, of course, have to be taken at times, and it has been ably argued that risks such as we were asked to take then—and
such as Lord Cecil would have us take now—apparently ought to have been accepted by a Power

like Great Britain if we had at heart the promotion of the cause of established peace. But in our opinion, the magnitude of the risks put them absolutely out of court.

However, so far as we are concerned, the Protocol proposals,
as set forth in 1924, are dead.
What is of greater import is the acknowledged fact that we have shown our readiness to go to considerable lengths. Our actions have proved that. Always loyal to the undertakings given at the Washington Conference, at Geneva the Government, through its spokesmen, signified its willingness to go much farther in the agreed limitation of naval armaments. It accepted the arbitration of the League in the Mosul boundary. It entered into the sufficiently grave commitments
involved in the Locarno Treaty.
It has reduced the aggregate expenditure upon armaments year
by year, and the country is now
disarmed to the limits of national safety. Any farther we cannot
go. These things, in themselves,
count for much, and indicate, as
Mr. Baldwin pointed out in his reply to Lord Cecil, that "progress can be made on the lines we are pursuing." Lord Cecil's difference with his colleagues has not,
it would seem, been a difference
upon "the broad policy of Disarmament," but a difference as to the means by which that policy
may best be advanced. He has,
apparently, taken inevitable disappointments much to heart, as is indicated by Mr. Baldwin's reminder that "it is the task of statesmen to learn from failure
no less than from success." His resignation is universally deplored;
but whilst Britain will have very great difficulty in filling his place she must go ahead unswervingly with her declared policy in the matter of naval disarmament;
must not, in other words, commit herself to further reductions to satisfy the widely accepted and generally sound ideas of one man
at the probable expense of the nation's safety.

RUM RUNNER FREED.

SEQUEL TO SEIZURE BY FINNISH WARSHIP.

Helsingfors, Yesterday.
The seizure of an Austrian rum running vessel, the "Hvalen,"
by a Finnish warship outside territorial waters has had an extraordinary sequel.
Legal experts found that the authorities were not justified in seizing the ship according to international law, and the vessel,
with cargo, was accordingly released and rejoined the rum running flotilla off the coast. Ben-

"ILLEGAL" COINS.

COPPER CURRENCY FOR KWANGSI.

PURCHASE IN CANTON.

Light is thrown on the seizure
in Hong Kong of illicit copper coins of China, a report coming down from Canton that the Kwangsi provincial government is interesting itself in procuring quantities of this currency to relieve the stringency up there.

A despatch has been sent to Canton asking permission for a Kwangsi delegation to proceed
thither to buy.

A Canton silver twenty cent
piece fetches about 32 or 34 coppers in the two Kwang provinces.
In Shanghai, Tientsin and other ports of North China, one always gets 44 coppers. The inducement to bring debased coinage down south is obvious. There being a demand in the two Kwangs, it is only natural that the rate should be higher.

Kwangsi's proposed buying delegation will comprise representatives of the provincial treasury,
the commercial bureau, the bankers and the merchants.

Ironside's Power.

Every day sees the Ironsides
(the Cantonese troops returned from the Yangtze campaign) increasing their strength in Canton
but no friction is apparent on the surface, with the Canton administration under General Li Chai-
sum.

Part of the 25th division (of the Ironsides) has been ordered to Shedung, the thriving town
where the Kowloon-Canton Railway (Chinese section) crosses the East River. Other units of the 4th Army are to garrison the provincial frontier between Kwang-tung and Kwangsi. Field and mountain batteries of artillery
have arrived at Canton. Recruiting officers have orders to enlist
men in the outlying districts
where transport and "army service" detachments are making preliminary surveys.

IN THE NEWS.

ITEMS FROM TO-DAY'S POLICE REPORTS.

The police have received a report
of the theft of a lady's handbag containing articles worth $26 from the Central British School some time between 10 and 11 p.m. on Wednesday. The bag was left by Miss M. White on a chair while she was dancing and it was gone when she returned.

As the result of attempting to jump off a train at Fanling, a 15-year-old Chinese youth fell and received a nasty scalp wound which had to be stitched at the Government Civil Hospital. His condition is not considered serious.

As the result of an accident while unloading gunny bags at Praga
East yesterday, a cargo cooler received injuries to his shoulder
which necessitated his removal to the Government Civil Hospital. A slip of bags broke and the load
fell on the man.

While on a visit to his father who is the keeper of the Wing On go-down in Des Vaux Road West, a Chinese boy climbed upon some scaf-
olding erected outside the godown.
He missed his footing and fell a short distance to the ground, receiving a scalp wound which had to be attended to at the Government Civil Hospital.

A 5-year-old Chinese girl was yesterday removed to the Government Civil Hospital suffering from a crushed foot as the result of being crushed down by a hand truck
in Des Vaux Road West. A wheel of the truck ran over the child's right foot.

A Chinese woman yesterday lost
jewellery worth $50 as the result of the activities of a confidence trickster whom she met in Queen's Road West. The man told the usual
story about finding a roll of bank-notes, and persuaded the woman, a waitress in a West Point Teahouse, to change the money for him. She parted with her jewellery as security for the money. When the parcel was opened at the money changers, it was found to contain waste paper. She returned to the place where the man had promised to wait
for her, but he had suddenly remembered a pressing engagement!

When Revenue Officers yesterday
searched the luggage of three Chinese coming off the Ho I On wharf,
the first man who had 76 tals of raw
and 5 tals of prepared opium, was fined $2,000 or six months on the first count, and $400 or three months on the other. The other two were each fined $2,000 or six months for the possession of 80 and 70 tals of raw opium respectively.

EXCELLENT FILMS.

LIFE AND LOVE IN AFRICAN OUTPOST.

THE OLD "CHARLIE."

Two excellent films are now
showing at the Queen's Theatre,
one an adaptation of Cynthia Stockley's well-known novel of life in the African outlands, "The Claw," and the other Charlie Chaplin's "A Dog's Life." The former supports the contention
that a good novel can almost always make a good photoplay, provided it is adequately and intelligently handled. The author's clever handwork is thrown on the screen step by step, and it is a treat to follow the story with the eye. A view of the picture will explain to anyone who has not yet discovered the fact why
cinema producers eagerly bargain
for the work of accepted authors
in preference to scenarios turned out on the lot.

"The Claw" tells of an English
girl, a part capably played by Claire Windsor, who becomes infatuated with a major who represents a big company at an outpost
in South Africa. Arthur Edmund Carew fills the role. The girl,
however, is engaged to another man who is sent to the outpost to
"make good" as the saying goes.
Norman Kerry takes this part of the potential rotter who, eventually, turns out a fine fellow.
There are in the meantime, however, a number of exciting passages, such as fights with natives,
and some cynical portrayals of
"society" in a small Colonial community, with its inherent snob-
bishness, catinness and, withal,
comicities.

A Query.

The other film, "A Dog's Life," shows us Charlie Chaplin as he was when he really had to work for his living. Here we have the slapstick stuff that made him
famous, the "dope" he was proud to give us with such artistry before he got an idea that he would like to play the role of "Hamlet."
Everyone in the theatre last evening enjoyed the picture, judging from the rolls of laughter.
Charlie with his over-small bowler, comical moustache, queer shuffling walk and expressive eyebrows went to the hearts of all.
The same may be said for the unnamed mongrel which, in the story, he adopts, and the unnamed
sweet girl he marries after finding her singing in a low-class
dancing hall.

Charlie we know. He has been before us ever since this film and many similar ones were made, so much so that to-day his private affairs are considered of world
importance and his domestic details are telegraphed to the ends of the earth. But what of that dog? And the sweet girl, who played opposite him? The mongrel, in its way, showed itself
as clever as has Rin Tin Tin, and the girl, it seemed, stood a good chance of developing into a star.
Have the pair, like Charlie, arrived
anywhere, or has the mongrel
retired to the back alleys and dust-bins of the curbstones, and
the girl sought to merge the grief
born of blighted film-fame in the energetic rearing of a large family in a New York suburb?

I wonder. — H. C.

P'RAPS-P'RAPS NOT!

Peak Young Lady: "I'm going
to sell kisses at the Fun o' the Fair. Do you think five dollars
will be too much to charge?"
Her Friend: "Oh, dear, no!
People always expect to be cheated
at bazaars."

Manager: Vot? You come into zees famous restaurant, drink ze
glass of water an' zen walk calmy
out?

Scott: Hotts, mon! Did ye expect me to stagger out?

"I told you not to use the silver
for cooking. And now I find you stirring up the gravy with a silver spoon."

"Oh, but the spoon was dirty,
anyway!"

"What the devil are you doing
all this time, chauffeur?"

"I'm counting the nails, sir. If there is one too many we have got a puncture."

"Heads we have a drink, tails
we don't, we said. And there it is — tails. What'll we do, George?"
"Don't be silly—toss the coin
again."

"These flimsy garments are terrible, Madam. Every time you open the door one of them blows
away."

"When was he hurt?"
"Well, the bull tossed him up yesterday, but he's only just come down."

Manager of hotel (to new boot-boy, who is very slow): "Now
then, my lad, it's taking you a long time to black those boots, isn't it?"
Bootboy: "Yes, sir, some of them
were brown when I started!"

They were newly wedded—not in the best of circumstances. Said he: "If things don't go better with us, darling, I suppose your father won't see us starve?"
"No, poor dear," replied the young wife, "his eyesight gets worse every day."

A Society lady felt unwell at a reception, so instructed her chauffeur to drive to her doctor's place in Harley-street. The doctor saw her at once, diagnosed her case
rapidly, and gave prompt advice.
"You have caught a chill," he said,
"drive straight home, get dressed,
and go to bed!"

A man went to a newspaper office
and complained that his death had been announced erroneously.

"Well," said the editor, "we never contradict anything we have published, but I'll tell you what I'll do.
I'll put you in the births column
to-morrow and give you a fresh start."

"John," observed his wife in a rather ominous voice, "I found some very queer-looking tickets in your desk this morning."

"Did you, dear?" replied John,
meekly.

"Yes. One of them said:
'Ptolemy 100 to 7.' What does that mean?"

"Oh, my archaeological studies,
my dear," responded John, "tell of a lost race."

Five-year-old Josh was at dinner
at a neighbour's one day when she was surprised to see the whole family before eating, saying grace.
At last she asked, "What are you doing?"

"We are thanking the Lord for giving us this bread," said her hostess. "Don't you give thanks
at home?"

"Oh, no," answered Joan, "we pay for our bread."

Slightly Muddled Lady: "As I said to 'Arriet at th' time, 'never mind abah th' truth, 'Arriet, tell
th' magistrate what 'actually' ap-pened!"

Nervous Person: "And what would happen, captain, if the ship
struck an iceberg?"

Captain: "My dear young lady,
the iceberg would pass along as if nothing had happened."

Person: "How perfectly topping!"

Husband: "What! Dinner not ready again? I'm going to a restaurant!"

Wife: "Oh, just wait five minutes, sweetheart."

Husband: "Will it definitely be ready then?"

Wife: "No, I'll come with you."

In deciding whether or not these two parts formed the note which had been in the possession of Mrs. Mackay, His Lordship asked the jury to hear in mind the evidence of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank employee that forgeries of this type were of fairly frequent occurrence. The Crown asked them to find that the half found was Mrs. Mackay's property also because it was found at the same time and place as the wad of notes and it was known that Mrs. Mackay had previously had a wad of notes in her handbag. Also found at the same time was the Wing On coupon.

For the Jury.

There was no direct evidence, said His Lordship, that this coupon either was in Mrs. Mackay's possession at all. It was known that Mrs. Mackay made purchases which entitled her to such a coupon either the day of or day before the murder and also that the coupon was issued at the counter where Mrs. Mackay made purchases. Articles of a similar nature in question were also in her possession. It was for the jury to say whether, putting all these facts together, there was sufficient for them to say that the coupon found on the path was that belonging to Mrs. Mackay. If they came to that conclusion, it immediately strengthened them in the conclusion that the half a forged note found on the same path also came from Mrs. Mackay's handbag. His Lordship declined to pass an opinion on this himself and asked that it should be the very first point considered by the jury. If they decided in the negative, His Lordship stated that he did not think that any solid foundation remained for conviction. If they decided in the affirmative then they must consider the evidence further and take it as a whole. The case did not entirely rest on that aspect of it and it was only right from the point of view of all concerned that all avenues should be explored.

Crown's Evidence.

Additional evidence which the Crown alleged implicated the prisoners was as follows. They were arrested in Shaikwan together twenty-four hours after the murder. When arrested, they were wearing clothing similar to that described by the only eye-witness of the incidents leading up to the murder, the taller in dark coat and light trousers and the smaller of the two in dark throughout. The two men were known from other evidence to have been together on the night of the murder and to have slept on board a boat when they were still wearing the clothes in which they were arrested.

A smaller point was that the two men had exactly the same notes in their possession. Another point made by the Crown concerned the wound on the hand of the second prisoner and the finding of blood inside the rifled hand bag of the murdered woman. In this connection, the jury must not ignore entirely the possibility, however remote, that the murdered woman before her death herself opened the bag to see what was taken. There was evidence that when she leant on her little nephew for support there had been blood on her hands. On the other hand, blood had also been found on a note in the possession of the first prisoner and a ten cent piece in the possession of second prisoner.

For the Prisoners.

There was a good deal to be said from the prisoners' point of view, said His Lordship, on the evidence which had been offered. There were certain factors in the Crown case which he did not want the jury to regard with undue importance. The first was that when arrested stains which the medical evidence went to show were of human blood were found on their clothing. In this connection it seemed to him that it was almost impossible for blood to have appeared on the clothing of her assailants from the murdered woman. The first prisoner had stated that he had been suffering from bleeding boils and it was quite possible in view of the habits of men of his class that he had not changed his clothes for some time.

Regarding the suggestion of the Crown that the wounds on the deceased having been inflicted with a blunt instrument and the wound on the second prisoner's hand having been inflicted with a blunt instrument, therefore the instrument used had been the same. His Lordship emphasised that there were numerous such blunt instruments and he did not think importance should be attached to this point.

Another point was the statement of the first prisoner on arrest that the blood, or some of the blood, on his trousers was fish blood, a statement which had proved false. The Crown has put forward the suggestion that prisoner had lied from a guilty mind, but from a considerable knowledge of the behaviour of Chinese prisoners on arrest His Lordship asked the jury not to attach importance to this point either. On the ground that it was impossible to say definitely that the second prisoner had not cut his hand with a knife, His Lordship also asked

THE D.B.S.

ACTIVITIES OF THE NEW TERM.

SPLENDID ADAPTABILITY.

The Diocesan Boys' School term began three weeks ago and the Committee and the Headmaster have lost no time in adapting the temporary premises at Mongkok to the purposes of a School. Grounds have been formed and a strong fence erected and there are also two hard tennis courts. A covered playground 60 feet by 25 feet will be built at the corner of Nathan Road and Prince Edward Avenue during the next six weeks. This term two cricket nets and cricket matting have been purchased and on most of the evenings of the week passers-by can see tennis, cricket and football being played. The standard of Cricket at the school was never better, although there are weak places. Regular practice at the nets and the fielding practice which takes place at recess, fifteen times and after School, will no doubt help to produce greatly the standard and produce more players throughout the School.

There are 67 boarders this term and about 160 day boys. The following appointments have been made during the year—Senior School Prefect—Chan Leung Chi.

Senior Boarders Prefects—Woo Chia Eng and P. Waller. Captain of tennis—Lee Ian Pit. Captain of football—Pong Pun Fong.

Captain of cricket—D. Anderson. The Games Masters are—Mr. E. C. Thomas (football), Mr. T. S. W. Chan (tennis) and Mr. J. L. Youngsage (cricket).

Football Matches will begin next week, trial matches, senior and junior have been held during the past week. In cricket and tennis the teams have already met with several successes.

With regard to work there have been very few changes in the staff. All boys must learn Chinese; in this subject several English and Eurasian boys are making steady progress in writing, reading and speaking; formerly many of these boys could speak a little Chinese but practically none of them learned the characters, a thing which is now compulsory. Mr. Law Lok Tin, senior vernacular master and Mr. Tse Tin Tsung, late of the London Mission, and a teacher who knows Mandarin and Japanese in addition to Cantonese, have been revising the syllabus and time table in Chinese during the year. Regular periods are fixed now for homework as well as for work in School. Next year it is hoped to introduce Mandarin into the two senior classes.

For science, chemistry and physics, Classes 1 to 4 go to the Science Room which was fitted up at the New School, now the General Hospital. Mr. J. L. Youngsage, B.Sc. and Mr. A. G. Frew, B.A., both Old Boys and Graduates of the Hong Kong University, are the Science Masters.

RELIGIOUS WARS.

MORE TROUBLE IN INDIA.

Dehra Dun, Yesterday.

the jury not to attach too much importance to the evidence which had been given showing that it was unlikely that it could have been done in sharpening prisoner's nails.

His Lordship, in conclusion, laid special stress on the fact that prisoners had made no statement on arrest although the first prisoner had contended that he endeavoured to make a statement and was debarred from so doing. The police evidence on this point had, however, been emphatic. It was peculiar that, if these men were guilty of the attack, they should have made no attempt—having the money to do so in their possession—to get away from the vicinity of the murder and to change the clothes they were wearing at the time of the murder. Finally, His Lordship said that it was not a necessary inference that because the second prisoner had deposed to an early knowledge of the murder therefore he must have taken part in it.

Finally, His Lordship commented on the decision of the defence not to give evidence and on the absence of corroborative evidence of their having played "tin kau" on the night in question. Counsel had concentrated not on establishing prisoners' innocence but in holding that the Crown had failed to prove their case—a course which he was perfectly entitled to follow. The jury retired for thirty minutes and returned a verdict.

WHITEY PRESENTED.

JAZZ MASTER MEETS TWO GOVERNORS.

SEASON CLOSING.

By special request Whitey Smith and his famous Majestic Orchestra played during fifteen yesterday afternoon which was given by His Excellency the Governor of Macao in honour of their Excellencies Sir Cecil and Lady Clement.

At the request of Their Excellencies, Whitey was presented to them, and also to His Excellency the Governor of Macao and Madame Barbosa received from them all very deserving praise.

On Saturday evening, Whitey plays at the Lee Gardens in aid of the Ministering Children's League. On Sunday afternoon, his Orchestra will play for Tea Dancers at Repulse Bay Hotel.

Whitey's Season in Hong Kong, which was all too short, comes to a close on Tuesday, October 4, when he gives his Farewell Carnival at Repulse Bay Hotel. He states he is putting up his very best as a mark of gratitude for the very enthusiastic reception he has received during his short season at Repulse Bay Hotel. Naturally a very large crowd is expected to attend, as this is the last chance offered to the Hong Kong Public of hearing the Majestic Orchestra, for on Wednesday, Whitey and his very cheery kids sail for Shanghai by the "Empress of Canada."

HIT WITH BARS?

FOREMAN CHARGES FOUR COOLIES.

Evidence was yesterday afternoon taken by Mr. R. E. Lindsell in the case in which a foreman employed by the Hong Kong Excavation, Pile Driving and Construction Company charged four sub-contractors' coolies with assault and intimidation.

According to the foreman, he was employed by the Construction Company to supervise the levelling of a certain site on Stubbs Road. The work entailed the blasting of a large boulder which was hanging in a dangerous position on the slope. He gave instructions to the matched coolies to erect a scaffolding on one side of the rock, but the men dallied with the work until September 22, when the witness caused foot-boards to be cut into the boulder, and climbed to the top of it with two of his own folk. While they were there the four defendants with another man who was not in custody came on the scene and threatened the witness and his folk that if they started blasting operations there would be trouble.

The witness did not mind the men, and climbing down the rock, proceeded to put his tools away in a matched below the level of the road. As the witness was returning to the boulder, he was waylaid by the defendants and assaulted. Defendants were all armed with short iron bars.

European Evidence.

Replying to Mr. L. D. Turner, for the defence, the witness said that he had never heard any discussion about the defendants not getting their wages from the Construction Company. The witness admitted that he had been in Court before and had been fined for the possession of dynamite.

Mr. Turner told the Magistrate that he would prove that the complainant had been brought up for something else. Mr. H. J. Armstrong, for the prosecution, intimated that some European members of the Construction Company would be called to give evidence on the complainant's behalf.

The case was then adjourned.

INCOMPLETE.

OFFICIAL EVIDENCE IN OPIUM CASE.

Charged with selling opium without a permit from the Government Import and Export Office, a Chinese who was defended by Mr. A. E. Hall was yesterday discharged by Mr. W. Schofield at the Kowloon Magistracy on the ground that the prosecution had not produced all the evidence necessary to prove their case. The accused was alleged to have sold 20-cents worth of opium to a coolie who visited his house in Tungston Street on the instruction of Revenue Officer Brown. The place was raided immediately after the opium had been sold, and the accused was arrested. Accused was alleged to have admitted selling the opium to the coolie.

Mr. Hall contended that the statement made by the accused to the revenue officers was not admissible as evidence as he had not been previously warned, but after some argument the Magistrate ruled against Counsel on this point, as it was necessary for raiders to take such statements in order to determine the responsible person.

Mr. Hall then submitted that in any case the prosecution was incomplete, as although a Chinese R.O. had spoken about discovering opium containers, neither the 20-cents paid for the opium had been produced in Court. Mr. Schofield agreed with Counsel on this point, and the accused was discharged.

PAID FOR TREATED.

MHO OF MACAO LOTTERY CASE.

A WARRANT ISSUED.

At the conclusion of the Criminal Sessions this morning, the Chinese who failed to answer to his name at the date fixed for his trial was given a final chance of answering the charge against him of attempting to bribe a constable in connection with the sale of Macao "po pul" (lottery) tickets.

The man's name was again called and, as he again failed to appear, his bail of $1,000 was exonerated, and on the application of Mr. H. K. Holmes, Crown Solicitor a warrant for his arrest was issued.

MANCHURIA TO-DAY.

DISRUPTIVE ELEMENTS IN EVIDENCE.

Tokyo, Sept. 7. Japan has been fortunate during the past twenty years of beneficent rule in the Manchurian area to escape the agitation and confusion of government that has brought disaster to South China, but it is now evident that disruptive elements are active in the Three Eastern Provinces, and that the Tokyo Government has to contend with a disorderly group which may or may not be inspired by the communistic agitators of the South, but most likely are. It was not to be expected that Japan would escape the effects of the feverish supply that seized the military and their henchmen in the South. It is hard for a badly ruled people to resist the glamour of the Soviet promises, and harder still to throw off the Soviet yoke once it has been imposed, for millions are despoiled for the benefit of the few. This cruel fact is now fully realised by the people over large areas of South and Central China, though realization brings with it an added pang for classes and masses are powerless. Japan's duty, as far as possible, is to prevent the agencies that have been so successful in introducing the Soviet autocracy into South China from reducing Manchuria to similar straits.

Japan's difficulties are obvious. She controls only a very small area in South Manchuria, and while this rule has an influence over a very much larger area in restraining the disorderly elements, bandits and others, she can only exercise a moral influence over the provincial authorities. If they are well disposed, well and good, but at the moment they are showing themselves to be anything but well disposed, and inclined to flout Japan.

This symptom, observable for months past, and probably a natural consequence of the disorders in the South, has given Japan not a little anxiety. It shows itself in many ways; in the projection of railway schemes inimical to the interests of the South Manchuria Railway, and in conflicts in the consular areas where the Japanese consular police is an institution naturally not welcome by the local Chinese authorities but are considered absolutely necessary for the safety of the consul and the Japanese community. Chinese rule in Manchuria is as lax and separate as in other parts of China. But in the past Manchuria, under Chang has had a special reputation, and conditions in the three provinces have seemed to be altogether superior to conditions in other parts of the ill-governed republic. In the last few years, Chang himself has lost power; his treasury is depleted by unending warfare, and the provincial finances are in a bad way. His paper money is exchanged at a heavy discount. Japanese money is the only stable currency, and here we come to the root of the troubles in Manchuria. We need probe little further for the causes of present unrest. Only a few short years ago, Chang's government was being held up as a model for the rest of China to follow, but Chang himself was persuaded to meddle in affairs that did not concern him, and disregarding the advice of his best counselors he preferred war to peace, and may live to see his provinces taken from his control.—"Japan Times."

CHAMPAGNE DISPUTE.

SETTLED AT LAST IN FRANCE.

The Battle of Champagne seems to be over. Parliament thinks it has settled a wine war that caused riots at Ay 20 years ago and has lasted ever since.

Wine-growers of the champagne district around Rheims and along the Marne, used violence at that time to prevent champagne makers from bringing in wines from the neighbouring Aube and Upper Marne departments and bottling them as champagne, after the usual process of putting the fizz in them. They objected later to the sale of these wines as "second zone" champagne, charging that the "second zone" became smaller and smaller on the labels.

Courts have been busy for years trying to settle the quarrel. Finally it agreed to let one deputy, Edouard Barthe, a famous expert settle the question. His report limiting champagne to the traditional champagne district and defining the "zone" has been written into the law, and peace seems restored.

QUEER LIVELIHOOD.

PICKING UP THINGS OFF STREETS.

Toss a partly-consumed cigarette or cigar on any street in the International Settlement of Shanghai at any hour of the day or night and it will promptly be snatched up by some coolie ever on the alert for cigarette or cigar stubs, discarded newspapers or even pieces of string. It is estimated that there are more than 200 coolies in the Settlement who do nothing but walk the streets picking up things thrown away. These coolies are not municipal employees but work independent of the regular street cleaners. These coolies are fond of telling of old Chu Tseng-li, a street coolie whom they claim found $55 and was given $10 reward. That was two years ago and with each telling the sum increases until now it is more than a million dollars.—United Press.

The Shanghai "Zarya" has it that Russian refugees are arriving by every steamship for the north. Some of them are leaving Harbin and Vladivostok because of the impending cold weather, according to the journal, whilst others have left the service of Chang Chung-chang in Shantung, preferring poverty in Shanghai to unsuccessful military operations in the peninsula.

It is learned from Russians sources that the s.s. "Sishan" from Vladivostok, brought to Shanghai a large number of Russian women and girls, who are thought to have been Communist agents. For the time being, and to divert suspicion, it is stated that they will obtain employment as dancing partners in local cabarets and as waitresses in the "mushroom" Russian restaurants that have sprung up.

At a meeting at the Shanghai Chinese General Chamber of Commerce, Chinese merchants decided to request the Nationalist Government to devise means whereby foreign cigarette manufacturers may be taxed on the same basis as Chinese, as they say, it is unfair to levy 50 per cent. on Chinese-made cigarettes while the wares of foreigners are exempt.

The opening of an air mail service from Colombo to Tanjore and from Tanjore to Madras and from Madras to Bombay, Calcutta and Karachi is in contemplation. Application is to be made for the bounty both to the King and the Governor-General.

Held on police bail of $2,000 which was afterwards reduced by Mr. R. E. Lindell to $25, a coolie foreman of the Kowloon Godown Company who had previously been remanded, was yesterday produced before Mr. W. Schofield at the Kowloon Magistrate's charged with assaulting a coolie employed by the Company. It was stated that disobedience on the part of the subordinate led to a fight between the foreman and the coolie, in the course of which the foreman was alleged to have kicked the coolie. The Police fixed bail at $2,000 because it was at first thought that the coolie had suffered a ruptured spleen. The Magistrate having ascertained that the injured man's condition is now not considered serious, ordered the defendant to pay a fine of $10.

A WEEK'S PAPERS IN ONE.

For the first time in many months Chinese military activities have shifted from the Yangtze ports to the coastal city of Swatow, which has been captured by a body of "Reds." Situated in the Provincial of Kwangtung and nominally under the dominance of General Li Chai-sum, Swatow capitulated to the invaders without much of a fight. Three Cantonese forces are now making their way towards the city, and it is expected that the "Reds" will evacuate rather than force the relieving soldiery.

The situation on the Yangtze is not very definite. What is certain is that the breach between the Wu-Han and Nanking Nationalists is gradually widening and that there is little likelihood of a united government or military organisation to take up arms against the North. Full details are given in the "Overland."

During the week the Portuguese colony of Hong Kong has been en fete in honour of the visit of H.E. the Governor of Macao. His Excellency's activities are fully set forth in this issue of the "Overland." Of great local interest also has been the trial of the two Chinese charged with the murder of a European lady, Mrs. Mackay, at Chai Wan, a little while ago. Sporting and social activities are fully dealt with in this issue.

LAWN BOWLS.

To-morrow's Interport Trial Match.

THE FAVOURED EIGHT.

Will a Better Standard of Play Be Seen?

(By "Short Head.")

No other lawn bowls matches are on the card to-morrow save the Interport trial match on the Craignower C.C. green, this being considered of sufficient importance to warrant an afternoon to itself. The respective rinks will comprise:

Atkinson	Laing
Smith	Bass
Holland	Cullen
Wallace	Pendered
(skip)	(skip)

Reserves: Omar and Macfarlane. Seven of these have already played on the same green twice (excluding the reserves), and one has played once. That is quite sufficient for them to find out any intricacies of the green—or should be. There is hardly likely to be any dispute as to the ultimate skip—Wallace has already won his place. Cullen has so far been the best of the Number Threes, but if Holland plays better than a fortnight ago there may be a good race for the position. Bass is more likely than Smith to get the second position. The problem of Number One is still unsolved. In the interval between last trial game Atkinson has beaten W. Macfarlane in the third round of the open singles championship, whilst Macfarlane has been on the losing side in the Spey Royal Cup contest. Could Atkinson reproduce his form against Macfarlane when he plays to-morrow neither Laing nor Omar would have much chance against him. But then his tie with Macfarlane was played on the K.C.C. green and not the Craignower.

It is only to be hoped that a much better display will be given by the teams as a whole.

As for the visiting Shanghai team since I wrote on Wednesday I hear that Malcolm was down here about nine years ago. He is Keenness personified, and that is a great asset to a side. The team as a whole, however, is much below what we were at one time led to expect, but, of course, that is not to say that Hong Kong can count its chickens before they are hatched. Anything may happen in lawn bowls.

DUNCAN WINS.

FRENCH OPEN GOLF TITLE.

Paris, Yesterday. George Duncan with an aggregate of 289 for 72 holes won the French open golf championship at the St. Germain links—Reuter.

BIG BILL TILDEN.

FACTS ABOUT FAMOUS PLAYER.

WHEN HE SLIPPED.

The "peak" in athletic form is an elusive thing. Sometimes it comes at the age of sixteen, sometimes at twenty-five, sometimes at thirty-five. Seldom after that. Once passed it's hard to get back again, writes Robert Edgren.

There's Tilden, the world's greatest tennis player for several years. Until last year Tilden had such an edge of superiority over all other players that he could tickle his opponents into coming within a point of winning, with Tilden far behind, and then come through in straight sets to a victory. Last year Tilden slipped and was beaten in individual championship play. This year he started like a whirlwind, after a long training siege, cleaned up opposition in this country, went to Europe and won his first championship tournament first of the semi-final before he slipped and was beaten out. He went on winning other matches—almost, but not quite the cocksure, invincible Tilden. He has to fight to win, these days. He has slipped over the peak of tennis form, and while he may beat a lot of other champions and contenders for championships, he won't be sure of himself at any time.

Big Bill is the greatest tennis player the game has ever known. He was as much above other players as Jags Willard was above other fighters when he knocked out Jack Johnson and found no other rival until four years of ring inactivity had faded. Tilden's height and great reach give him a tremendous advantage over other players. He has almost unlimited reserves of speed and endurance that can be called out in an emergency. He has a sense of the dramatic that makes him hold back in hard matches, to finish with an irresistible burst of furiously fast play. He seems always to be able to pull an unexpected rally and win with straight sets when hard pressed. A great player physically, and one of the closest students of all points of the game, Tilden is master of every stroke that can be used. He has turned defensive strokes into his best offence, and he often wins by some unexpected strategy. But there is the snag. He was beaten by the Frenchman, Cochet, when he had the game well won.

Tilden accompanied in Other Lines. Probably there never has been any other sport champion with so much versatility. When not concentrating his mind on preparing for a championship series, he thinks of nothing but music, bridge, art, and literature. Except that at any time he is willing to throw everything else over to take some young player out and coach him in the fine points of tennis. Tilden has developed most of his own strongest rivals, and he doesn't hold back any information that might be used against him later in competition.

Sincere and independent, he has many a set-to with the tennis authorities. In one case he went to the annual tennis meeting at the Waldorf, New York, where the Executive Committee were intent upon giving first-ten ranking to a favoured player who had competed in only one tournament during the season and delivered a broadside on the need of fairness in amateur sport and on ranking players on ability rather than on favouritism. As a result he forced the ranking of George Lott, of Chicago, who is now his closest rival.

Tilden has repeatedly refused to accept offers from Pyle, the promoter of professional tennis. While others have deserted the amateur ranks, Tilden has refused to go out after the big money. Some of those who deserted have criticised Tilden bitterly for not coming along and helping them to get bigger gate money as professionals, and have said that his writing, his posing for movies, and his stage attempts have really "professionalised him." This is sheer nonsense. Tilden isn't a capitalist, and he has to earn his living. He earns it by writing and by other activities not connected with playing tennis. He works for his living, using whatever natural talent he has. The old English idea that to be a "gentleman amateur" a contender must be a moneyed loafer with nothing to do but play has fallen out of favour in this country. In fact, none but those who had money and nothing to do ever favoured it. It never was an American idea.

Tilden has given up much, in money prospects, to remain an amateur.

Tilden No Longer Young.

Big Bill Tilden is no chicken. If he were a boxer he'd be considered rather ancient to be cavorting around among the champions. He was born at Germantown, Pa., on February 10, 1893. His elder brother was a good tennis player, and while still in short pants William chased balls for him on the courts of the Germantown Cricket Club, where in later years he defended his own national tennis honour. Tilden has taught himself the game and is still trying to learn. There's something new to be learned in tennis, even if the sport did originate in the courts of famous kings several hundred years ago.

Big Bill has won more tennis championships than any other player in history. He won the American National Singles several years in a row, and was the first foreigner to win the English Singles classic at Wimbledon. He was in the American team that brought the Davis Cup from Australia, and with Little Bill Johnston successfully defended it.

Tilden received the title "Big Bill" while playing in England with William Johnston several years ago. The English sense of humour was tickled by the contrast between these two great champions, and "Big Bill" and "Little Bill" was the result.

Beaten at His Own Game.

Big Bill's scientific interest in tennis is responsible for the "cat and mouse" play he has shown in so many important matches. It seems to amuse him to let his opponent come within a stroke or two of winning and then cut loose at the last moment with an irresistible attack. He had the gallery on edge in a cup match several years ago when he let a Japanese player coming within one stroke of winning, and then ran out in straight sets without allowing the Japanese to score another point. This cold science has not been appreciated by the spectators as much as it has amused Big Bill. Little Bill Johnston and Maurice McLaughlin had a much greater hold on the tennis crowds. But perhaps part of that popularity came from the fact that these two great players had to use all their speed and skill and energy to win. They were always fighting, and the whole world loves a fighter. Big Bill is sometimes amusing himself by letting an opponent pile up points when he might prevent it by saying that he finds it interesting to study his rival's methods at their best, and then defeat the victim with his pet strokes. And to all appearances this is just how Tilden was defeated himself, for the Frenchman beat him at Wimbledon when he was within an ace of winning the match.

It's the same way in other sports. It's a great champion who can stand off the rush of ambitious youth through half a dozen years. Paddock. Charlie Paddock is one athlete who doesn't believe he has passed the peak. After a dozen years of competition in the sprints, in which he had outlasted scores of rivals, Paddock broke the 100 yards world's record last year and came out to try for the 220 yards record this year before retiring. His first spring races were fairly promising, but Paddock got into pictures and stopped training. He ran again and was beaten in Arizona by a local sprinter. Paddock said he wouldn't run again until next year. But lately he has been out on the track training. Charles has a new idea. He wants to team with Murray Schultz and the two fastest schoolboy sprinters in the country, Wyckoff and Slocum, of Glendale High School, and go after the half mile and mile relay world's records. Schultz is a 9.8 sprinter. Paddock might get down to 9.6. Wyckoff and Slocum have run consistently 9.8 through the season, and Wyckoff has run in 9.7 this year, with four of the five watches catching him in 9.6.

The Newark A.C. holds the present quarter mile relay record of 41.6 seconds, a last year. This should be easy to beat for Paddock and his team mates if they run to form. The same four are equally fast over the 220 yards, and should run a record half mile relay. Vincent Richards, comfortably established as a professional tennis player, points out the fact that the best amateurs, like Tilden, can ravel all over the world playing in amateur tournaments and matches, living in good hotels and all that sort of thing, even if they have no great "private income." Perhaps Vinnie is trying to chase a few more amateurs, including Tilden, out into the professional ranks. Pyle says he is planning more professional matches for the winter season. It would be funny if Tilden turned pro, and beat Richards as consistently as he beats him when both are amateurs—probably Tilden could make good money with a season of professional tennis, at that. His present come-back campaign would be good advertising.

La Barba Wants to Relinquish. Wanted, a chance to shake off a ring title belt. September. Here's an odd situation. Fidel La Barba, flyweight champion, is going to college in September and doesn't want to take his title along because it might be embarrassing to have all the professors running along to look at him when he crosses the campus. Fidel has put away money enough to pay for his education and stay in his business afterwards. He says he'll never pull on the glove again, professionally, when he's through with college.

Up in Boston they say that Fidel can solve a problem handled by fighting Vozza again, at the flyweight limit, just before September. They thought to draw a gate.

MUSSOLINI WORRIED ABOUT LATEST DANCES.

Does the Charleston offend religious sentiment? Can the "Black Bottom" be allowed at popular country fetes? These are the questions which the Ministry of the Interior, headed by Premier Mussolini, has just been called upon to answer.

About six months ago, an outcry was raised against modern dances and night-clubs, and an order was passed closing all the cabarets and night-life resorts of Italy.

Instructions were also given to the prefects of the various provinces by the Minister of the Interior, that a strict supervision was to be maintained on country fetes, where on Sundays and Saints days, the villagers gathered together in the evening and danced.

The instructions were followed with too great rigour by the prefects, it is said, who not only banned the Charleston and Black Bottom, but even voted the fox trot, and sometimes the waltz.

The Ministry of the Interior, in reconsidering the matter as a consequence of numerous protests, has decided that dancing as dancing does not offend religious sentiment, and is a proper diversion for young people on holidays, but it sets its face against extravagances in dancing.

The government leaves it to the local authorities to decide what "extravagance" may mean, and the result would seem, to be that the fox trot is all right for sylvan revellers, but the Charleston and Black Bottom are taboo. — Unit Press.

SHAKESPEARE PLAYS DISPUTED.

The centuries-old dispute as to whether Shakespeare or Francis Lord Bacon wrote the Shakespearean plays is renewed again in the latest book of Lord Sydenham of Combe, famous as the governor of Australia and India, as the first secretary of the Imperial Defence Committee, as one of the reorganisers of the War Office, and as a public commentator on the literature and history of the British people. "My Working Life" is the name of the new volume which has just been published by John Murray.

Lord Sydenham declares that the claim purporting that Shakespeare wrote Shakespeare in "an intellectually demoralising myth which has been infinitely harmful to the nation." In part he writes:

"Such totally different personages as Lord Palmerston and Parnell, John Bright, Bismarck, Emerson, Whittier and Mark Twain, without knowledge of the huge volume of Baconian research, arrived at the definite conclusion that plays embodying all the learning of the Elizabethan era and exhibiting an intimate acquaintance with law and with the life of the courts could never have been written by an educated rustic who became an actor of small parts, and who during his last years, while still in his prime, was engaged in petty trading, in the ruthless collection of small debts, and in trying to deprive the citizens of Stratford of their common lands."

BRITISH FILMS FOR EMPIRE DAY.

A member in Havana, Cuba, writes to "Overseas":

"I would be very grateful for any information you could give me as to the possible hiring of patriotic films for display on Empire Day and where to apply."

We passed her request on to the British Instructional Films, Ltd., of London, who specialise in patriotic and Empire films, and they replied as follows:—

"We are forwarding you a catalogue of our films, suitable for showing to school children on Empire Day."

"We must, however, point out that we do not quite see how your members in Havana propose to get the films. We imagine that these would be out of our hands for at least six weeks, and the hire for so long a period, together with the carriage, would come exceedingly expensive. We point this out because we are frequently getting requests for films of Empire interest from various parts of the Empire, but are unable to supply films because none of these requests are in any way co-ordinated. About six months ago we had an enquiry from the West Indies. Had they and Havana agreed to share a film, it might have been financially possible."

"We write at this length because we know how much educational films are needed throughout the Empire, and how much some central organisation for supplying them is required."

CINEMA IN SCHOOLS.

One subject at the Imperial Education Conference was considered by every one to be of immediate and outstanding importance—the use of the cinema in education and its influence generally on the life of the people. A report on this subject had been specially prepared for the Conference by the Imperial Studies Committee of the Royal Colonial Institute, and the matter was considered behind closed doors in order to ensure that there should be no restriction on the freedom of discussion. The preceding Conference in 1922 had already dealt with the matter, and its recommendations led to some action in many parts of the Empire; more drastic and effective action is now required, and the Conference unanimously passed a resolution that it is worth quoting:

"That this Conference, on the one hand earnestly hopes that the competent authorities will take every step to prevent the display of demoralising films, and on the other hand desires to emphasise the importance of the production and use of wholesome and suitable films which will convey an accurate impression of the life and condition of all parts of the Empire."

That this was almost the only resolution of the Conference is indicative of the importance of the subject and of the realisation of the cardinal fact that education is no mere matter of the schools, but is concerned with all the agencies that guide or influence the spiritual life.

SINGING IN ITALY.

Miss Maude Neilson, the clever Scottish singer, whom we knew with the Carl Rosa, has been doing some very successful work in Italy lately. The Italian critics seem to be delighted with "Matilde," as they call her. Miss Neilson has been singing both in concerts and in opera, and is now about to begin an operatic tour, during which she will appear at Palermo, Naples, and Venice, among other important Italian cities.

RETURN TO THE CHIMPANZEE.

If people keep on dancing to Black Bottom and its derivatives we'll soon be walking on all fours like the chimpanzee, according to Professor Haymond, of the Fies opera.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "the Charleston, the Black Bottom and the Hebble Jeebles and the rest of the negro dances are unworthy of our civilisation. They really give some colour of truth to the Darwinian theory. There is a reason for this. The anatomy of the negro is not the same as ours. The position of the knees, the modelling of the hips, the line of the foot make the dances all right for the negro."

"But instead of the vertical line which hitherto has been the normal one for white dancers, it is now more and more curved, getting closer to the horizontal. Even when not dancing the habits of the negroes stand and walk that way. They will end up by walking all day long, their heads in their shoulders, arms swinging. They will finally walk on hands and feet."

The famous danseuse Mme. Monna Faiva, first danseuse of the opera Comique, finds the modern dances "absolutely hideous and un-aesthetic." Mme. Monna Faiva regrets the disappearance of the hebble and the tango.

"The others which have come over the Atlantic," she added, are fantastic imaginings of delirious negroes whose principal inspiration was whisky — without soda." — United Press.

D'ANNUNZIO'S LATEST PLAY.

Gardone, Italy, Sept. 11.

Six hundred men and women personally selected by Gabriele D'Annunzio from 1,000 applicants paid a thousand lire each, about $65, to-day, to witness a special performance of the poet's tragedy, "Daughter of Nörö." The play was presented by a company of Italy's foremost actors in the open air theatre at the poet's villa. It was of special significance, as it celebrated the eighth anniversary of D'Annunzio's capture of Fiume. The proceeds will go to the completion of the Roman theatre at the poet's villa. — Associated Press.

SHAKESPEARE WEEK.

Shakespeare plays draw capacity houses even in a mining and industrial city like Bochum, Bochum is a Westphalian town of 150,000 in the heart of the Ruhr coal district. Ambassador Jacob Gould Schurman learned this to his surprise when he was recently invited to attend the annual Shakespeare week.

This yearly event usually takes place at Welmur, the idyllic, almost dreamy Thuringian capital famous for its memories of Goethe, Schiller, and Liszt. To show that an industrial community also has an appreciation of such things the Shakespeare week was successfully transferred to Bochum.

"It is a great thing," Ambassador Schurman said, "for a commercial and industrial city like Bochum to make possible a Shakespeare week. Nowhere on earth is there anything like it. Nowhere else did anybody think of placing the works of the great poet right amidst the hard labours of everyday life—a symbol, as it were, of the close connection existing between the practical and the spiritual life of humanity. That Shakespeare's works should experience a modern resurrection in Bochum is a sign of the high culture of Germany."

BETTY BALFOUR SURPRISE.

A surprise was sprung on theatre-goers by Miss Betty Balfour's announcement in Glasgow that she intended to withdraw from the cast of "Up with the Lark," the new musical comedy which was tried out in Glasgow in the course of a provincial tour prior to a London appearance.

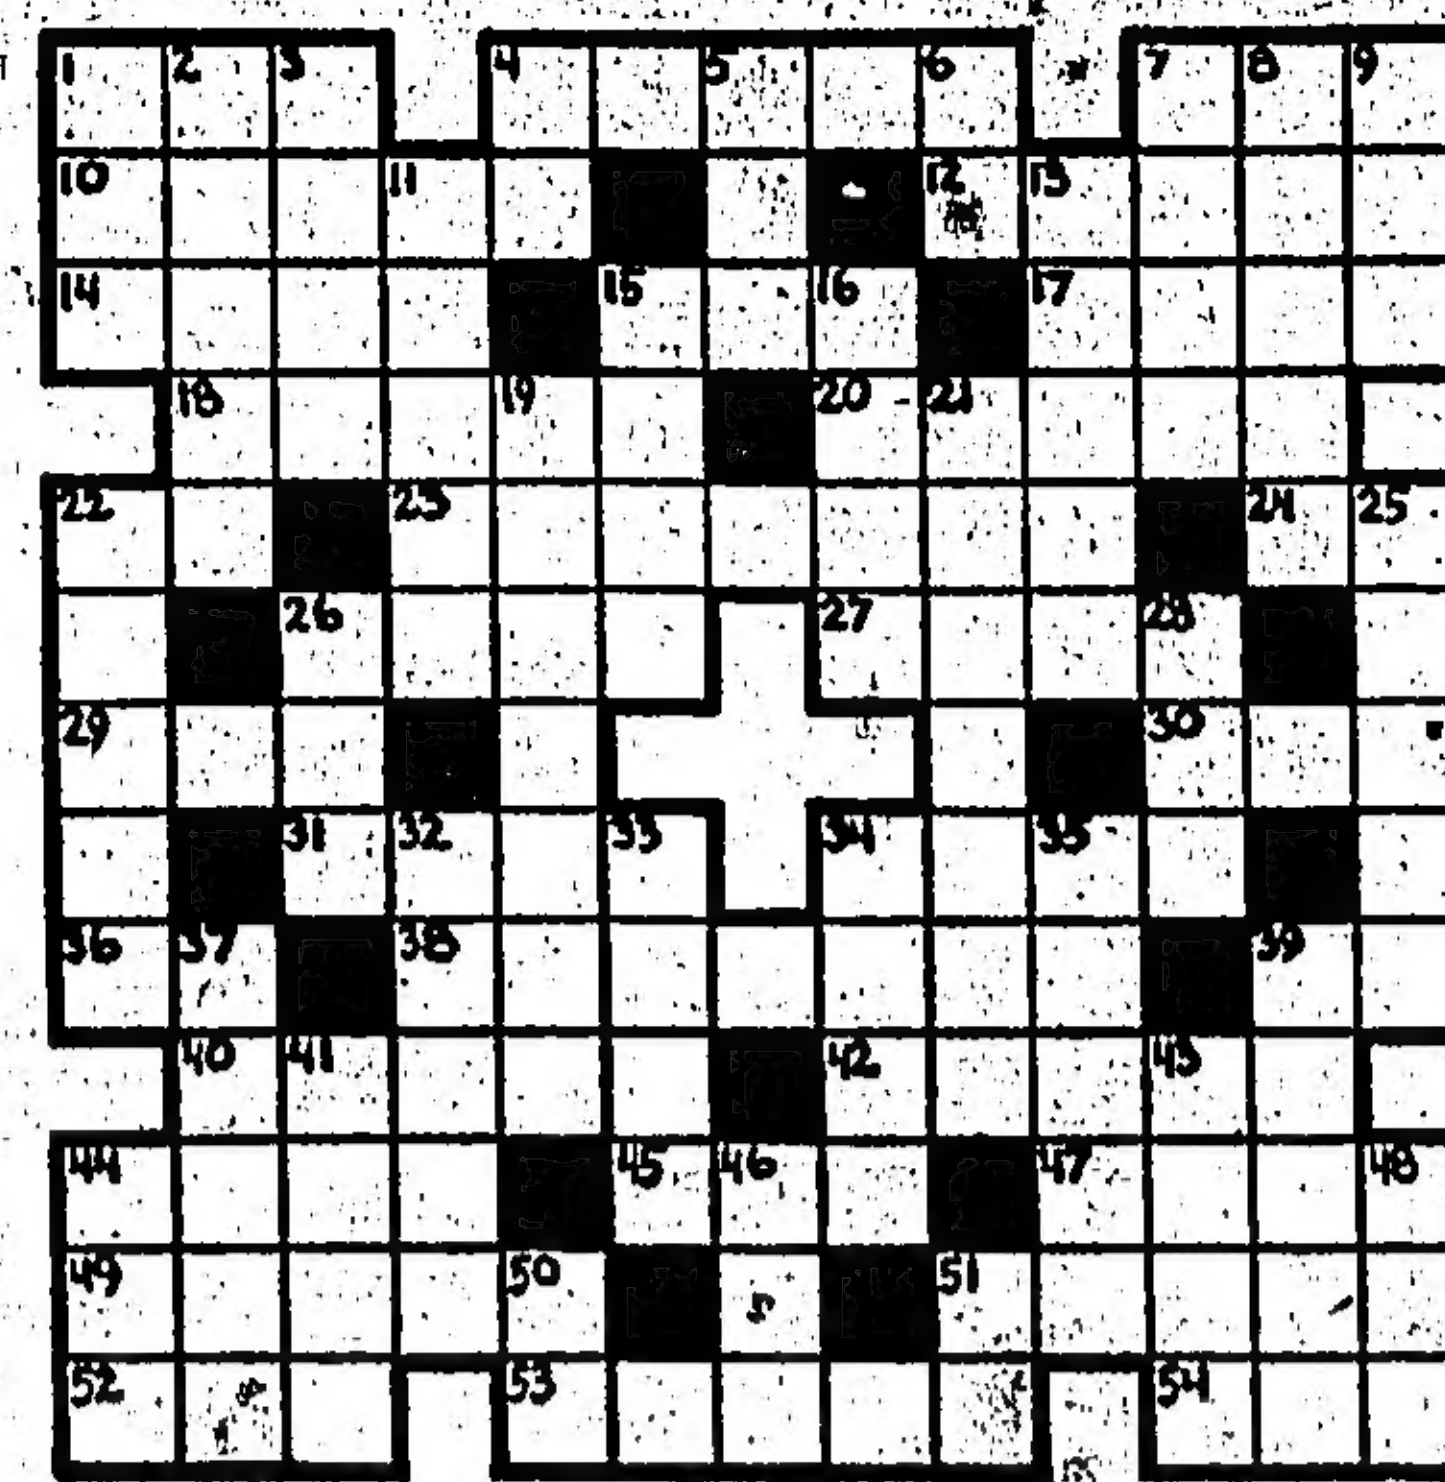

Briefly, Miss Balfour thinks that her role of Toto, the Parisian mid-inette, is unsuitable, and that in it she cannot fulfil adequately the expectations of her audiences.

Betty has decided to remain with "Up with the Lark" until it has had a week's run both in Edinburgh and Blackpool. But she will not appear in London.

A representative of the producers declared that they had acquiesced willingly in her decision, and that steps would be taken immediately to have a new play specially written in which she would have wider opportunities.

JAPAN & MUKDEN.

BOYCOTT MOVEMENT NOT DEEP ROOTED.

Mr. Yoshizawa's representations have taken effect and General Yang Yu-ting, Chang Tso-lin's right hand man, has left for Mukden to deal with the anti-Japanese agitation. The Japanese residents of Mukden are naturally excited, but the Government at Tokyo seems inclined to exercise patience, encouraged by the thought that if the movement has been officially encouraged it can be easily damped down. There is little else for Tokyo to do unless and until it should become convinced that a serious attack on Japan's interests is under way.

The Starting Point.

The trouble began with strikes and violence in the Pechihou Coal and Iron Company's works. Communist agitators were blamed but that is common form. The Mukden newspapers are now attacking Chang Tso-lin, and one of those mysterious societies which adopt high-sounding patriotic titles and appear out of the twilight at opportune moments is placarding Mukden with denunciations of the Generalissimo. Chinese newspaper proprietors are not the stuff of which martyrs are made, and the fact that they have come out against Chang as well as against Japan rather suggests the useful art of camouflage. It is clear also that the demonstrators have never got quite out of hand. We cannot yet tell how serious the boycott of Japanese goods may be, but the violence has up till now been more exasperating than dangerous. School children have been stoned, shop windows have been broken, and a so-called flag outrage has been reported. The official version of the latter incident has not reached Tokyo, but the press reports show that it was not the national emblem of Japan that was insulted but a banner printed with some congratulatory words about the birth of the princess. Mukden police are endeavouring to check rowdiness and protect the Japanese. A demonstration which was to have been held on Sunday was prohibited by the authorities. In short, there is so far no reason for undue alarm and no sign that the Government or the public in Japan are getting "rattled." Baron Tanaka has left Tokyo for a political tour in the country, and the act is evidence that he finds the latest reports reassuring.

A Danger Spot.

Manchuria is sometimes called the danger spot of the Far East and the reasons for that description are plain enough. They first took shape more than thirty years ago when Russia thrust the Chinese Eastern Railway right through Manchuria to the sea. The Russo-Japanese War effectively checked Russian penetration, and Japan acquired as a result of the war, Russia's rights in South Manchuria. In 1907 defined Manchuria as the Russian sphere. The Japan-Soviet agreement of 1907, and the Japan-Soviet agreement of 1916, both of which carried subsidiary lines of the Manchuria Railway into the Russian sphere by financing Kirin-Kalyuan and the Taomtsihar railroads, both of which were owned by the Chinese Government. In so doing Japan was to her rights under an agreement with China as well as under observations made at the Washington Conference. The Russians protested but their protest was laid. So long as the National Party was dominated by Russia it was inevitable that Russia should give her countenance to the party which opposed Russia's blocked Russian plans in Manchuria. But the Russians have been about their business and Japan shown a good deal of sympathy with Nationalist aspirations, seeking for an explanation of Mukden outbursts, therefore, possibility cannot be left out of account that Chang Tso-lin may be demonstrating to Japan that his influence that matters in Manchuria where Japan's interests lie is not the South's.

"Positive" Policy.

The orthodox explanation of the differences is that they are a protest against the so-called positive policy of the present Tokyo Government. The positive policy, however, is a nebulous affair and seems to be something for home consumption during the impending elections rather than any new departure in China. The most tangible description that can be given is that the positive policy is an intention to press to a conclusion certain pending questions. The foremost of these is the Japanese protest against the construction of the Hallungchen-Kirin and the Chaoyangfu-Shiao River railroads, built for China with Japanese capital, and violating the treaty provision that China shall not build railways parallel to the South Manchuria line. Japan has also entered a strong protest against the surtaxes imposed on trade by the Mukden Government. Those appear to be the only important requests which Japan has made recently, and they are not new. It is reported from China that Japan is also pressing for the right, acquired by the 1915 treaty, to lease land in South Manchuria for her various enterprises there which are rapidly developing the wealth of Manchuria and which urgently require larger holdings. The establishment of consulates near the Korean border is also contemplated. The land lease question, however, has not yet been raised. Chang's strongest objections are probably directed against the veto on his new railways, parts of which are already built, but he can hardly have been ignorant of the 1915 treaty and if he was he must have been reminded of its existence before now.

Policy Unchanged.

On the whole, the substance of the positive policy does not seem sufficient to explain the anti-Japanese movement in Mukden, though the method was calculated to create alarm. The holding of elaborate conferences and the almost spontaneous generation of a crop of rumours were bound to make the Chinese fear that something dreadful was coming. In reality, Japanese policy seems to be much as it was. It is significant that the leader of the Opposition, addressing his party last Thursday, offered no objections to the Government's actions in Manchuria though he vigorously attacked it for sending troops to Shantung. The Japanese press, which is in most things critical of the present Government and generally sympathetic with Nationalist China, has found nothing to oppose in the Manchuria policy except its method. The international relations of China, already complicated almost beyond rational explanation, are further complicated by their latest turn. No explanation can be offered with any great confidence that it may not be disproved by events, but the facts that are known, such as they are, suggest that the movement is not very deeply rooted, and that patience and caution will see it through.—Japan Advertiser.

Sir Austen Chamberlain
And Dictator.

PRESS CENSORSHIP.

Question Of Tangier Likely To Be Discussed.

Paris, Yesterday.
Mystery surrounds the conversation which Sir Austen Chamberlain to-day is having with the Spanish Dictator, Primo de Rivera.
"Le Journal's" Madrid correspondent says that the greatest secrecy is being maintained as to the whereabouts of Primo de Rivera. The Spanish have ordered a censorship of newspapers which are not to publish anything concerning the affair there. The correspondent understands that the main topic of discussion is the incorporation of Tangier in the Spanish zone of Morocco, a question which the Government of Spain is anxious to have settled before the Spanish sovereign goes to Morocco on October 4.—Reuter.

STORM VICTIMS.

Up to now it is known that 28 perished and hundreds were injured by the tornado. Houses were levelled to the ground and communications were paralysed.
A hurricane with a velocity of 90 miles an hour broke with bewildering suddenness. Roofs were torn off and walls collapsed. Thousands of trees were rooted up, blocking the streets. The air was full of flying debris and pedestrians were blown from their feet.—Reuter's American Service.

Amsterdam, Yesterday.
The Rotterdam custom officers have seized a large quantity of arms, including 100 revolvers and 10,000 cartridges aboard the Dutch steamer "Gemina" bound for the East Indies, presumably smuggled aboard by Chinese stokers on behalf of Communists.—Reuter.

It is reported that oil companies working in the Tampico area will dismiss three-quarters of their workers in the next fortnight as a result of a decrease in oil production and bad business conditions. Thousands of men are involved.—Reuter's American Service.

London, Yesterday.

MEXICAN REBELS.

FIGHTS WITH FEDERAL TROOPS.

Mexico City, Yesterday.
The Presidential Bureau issued a bulletin stating that rebellious Catholic fanatics were killed and a Catholic Fathered Sedano was captured, summarily court-martialled and executed.

FENGtien FORCES ATTACKED.

Peking, To-day.
Shansi troops attacked Fengtien forces on September 29 in the vicinity of Tsakko, south-west of Kalgan. Fengtien troops cut the Peking-Suiyuan railway and are taking up defensive positions. 10 reinforcements from the Peking-Hankow railway are concentrating.

Yang Yu-ting, Marshal Chang Tso-lin sent the reactionary Tungan Lung-kiang from Peking, Mukden to take over the command of Manchuria and has ordered Chief of Staff, Yang Yu-ting, Peking immediately from Mukden. There is a possibility of friction between Chang Yang, and this would have interesting effect, no doubt, upon Northern affairs.

The Shansi delegate in Mukden has been arrested.—Reuter.

AN AIR VICTOR.

Ft.-Lieut. Webster's Home Coming.

R.A.F. ESCORT.

Schneider Cup Winner To Be Welcomed.

London, Yesterday.
It has now been arranged that Flight Lieut. Webster, who won the Schneider Cup, shall return home with Worsley and Kinkaid and other members of the British team by air. The airman will journey from Venice to Paris by train and then embark as passengers on an air liner for Croydon, where they will arrive on Saturday afternoon.

The air liner will be escorted from the coast by special Royal Air Force machines.

Air Minister Sir Samuel Hoare will probably be at Croydon to receive the airman, but if he is unable to be present—he is in attendance on the King in Scotland just now—the Under-Secretary for Air, Sir Philip Sassoon, will represent him. Other members of the Cabinet and many other representatives of the aviation world will also be present.

A huge crowd is expected at Croydon. The airman are at any rate assured of a great popular welcome. It is estimated that the aerodrome can accommodate something like 200,000 spectators. The winning Supermarine Napier S Five seaplane and the other machines are being brought home by a naval vessel. It is hoped it may be possible to exhibit the seaplane to the public, who have had no opportunity of inspecting it since it was shown only to a few privileged visitors at Calshot before going to Venice.—British Wireless Service.

Medals For Airmen.

The Provincial Fascist Federation has presented a gold plaque to Webster, a silver plaque to Worsley, and gold medals to each of the other participants in the Schneider Cup Race, both British and Italian.—Reuter.

MR. S. FESSENDEN.

HIS SERVICES TO SHANGHAI.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Shanghai, Yesterday.
This evening two hundred Shanghai clubmen celebrated Mr. Sterling Fessenden's 52nd birthday.

After eulogistic speeches by the American Consul-General (Mr. E. S. Cunningham), the French Consul-General (M. Naggari), the Chief Judge of the British Court (Mr. Justice Peter Grain) and the American Attorney (Mr. J. Franklin) of Mr. S. Fessenden's services to Shanghai, Sir Sidney Barton (British Consul-General) presented Mr. Fessenden with a basket containing "view of Shanghai," autographed by all present.

Mr. Fessenden, responding, said he believed Shanghai's future depended on all nationalities working for the maintenance of peace and order. He sternly denounced all parties attempting to force the hands of the Powers by causing "incidents." He called on nationals of all countries to use influence to prevent any split in the present administration while pointing out that some nationalities were justifiably demanding a greater voice in the administration of Shanghai.—Reuter.

Mr. Fessenden, the doyen of the American bar in Shanghai, is the senior partner in the law firm of Fessenden, Holcomb & Snyder and has for the past few years been chairman of the Shanghai Municipal Council. He was one of the founders of the American Club in Shanghai, a committee member of the Shanghai Club and is equally interested in all affairs affecting the American and foreign communities generally in the International Settlement.
